Collaboration

Describe what this person did to demonstrate the core value.

Chuan took the initiative to plan and organize the Product and Technology Onsite in September – an effort that went far beyond logistics. Rather than keeping it a siloed event, he intentionally invited employees from other areas of the business, creating an environment where people could connect, share ideas, and strengthen cross-functional relationships. His goal was not just to execute an event, but to foster collaboration and inclusion across eMoney.

While this is an annual event, how you do anything is how you do everything, and Chuan consistently goes out of his way to bring people together.

What impact did this have on others, the team, or the company?

Chuan made a lasting impact by tackling a common organizational challenge – breaking down silos between teams. Through intentional collaboration and meaningful cross-department interaction, he helped bridge communication gaps between Technology, Product, and other business units – strengthening alignment around shared goals.

The impact extended well beyond the event itself. Attendees left feeling included, inspired, and connected to eMoney's mission. They made new connections, learned from diverse perspectives, and even supported a charitable cause. Chuan's efforts fostered trust, belonging, and engagement – reinforcing eMoney's collaborative culture and helping teams work more effectively together.
